GOLDBERGS'

AMUSEMENTS

"TWIN BEDS" COMES TO THE ELKS TONIGHT

"Twin Beds," one of the funniest comedies ever staged in America, will make its first appearance here tonight. One of the most important things about the return of "Twin Beds" to Phoenix is that Josephine Saxe, the star in the company which appeared here some time ago, is again with the company.

Those who have seen the production will remember with keen interest her delightful work in the play. She is one of the cleverest actresses to appear here in years, and she won a large following which will be pleased to know that she will appear again tonight and tomorrow night.

"Twin Beds" is about the funniest play which has ever been written. From the very first night there was never a doubt of its success. Laughter at first is merely sporadic and intermittent, but as the play progresses the laughs grow to a roar and seldom stop. It is a play which everyone enjoys without feeling afterwards that one has been a fool.

'WHEN BEARCAT WENT DRY' COMES SUNDAY

If thrills, suspense, love, romance and pulsating drama make a photoplay the "When Bearcat Went Dry" should be voted a gigantic success when it comes to the Columbia theater Sunday for a four-day stay.

This pictureization of Charles Neville Buck's famous novel of the "Cumberland mountains" has fights, feuds, moonshiners, love and romance following so closely together that your attention is held from the very beginning of the first reel to the last foot of the picture.

A battle royal between 50 mountaineers is one of the anti-climaxes of this super photoplay. "When Bearcat Went Dry" is a film offering that everyone should see. It carries unusual punch, pep and action.

The Border Legion, at Plaza
"The Border Legion," a wide-eyed story, starring Blanche Bates and Robert Bosworth, and acclaimed by New York newspapers and picturegoers as the most virile drama of the year, will be presented by Goldwyn at the Plaza theater last time today.

It tells the story of Joan Randall (Blanche Bates), a daring girl of the west, who makes her home in a mining camp in the Rockies. She is engaged to wed Jim Cleave, a shiftless prospector. She quarrels with him about his lack of energy and when he reports angrily she gives him back the engagement ring. Jim leaves camp after announcing he will join a band of desperadoes that has long preyed on the mining camps. After a week passes and Jim fails to return, Joan starts out in search of him. On the way she falls into the hands of Jack Kells, leader of the outlaw border legion. He draws Joan to his shack to hold her for ransom. That night Joan tries to escape and Kells grapples with her. In the scuffle, Joan grabs his revolver and shoots Kells. As she is about to flee, the wounded bandit pleads with her to remain and nurse him, declaring that he loves her. What happens thereafter brings about a climax as thrilling and exciting as it is unusual.

Charles Ray at the Strand
Charles Ray, than whom there is no more popular juvenile on the screen, begins a two-day engagement at the Strand today in his Paramount-Artcraft success, "Bill Henry."

As usual, his delineation is of the rural boy battling with the city, but this picture finds him starting his business career as a salesman for an electric vibrator, armed with a sample and a pamphlet setting forth in goodly terms all the merits of the invention. Trying it on his first prospect, hopelessly afflicted with rheumatism, he meets with such extraordinary success that he is promptly kicked from the place by the elderly gentleman who seemed to resent the departure of his cherished pains. Arriving at the city, fate throws him in the same hotel where there is stopping a young girl, who, coming to the town to take possession of the neighboring ranch, left her through the death of a relative, she learns that the land is a worthless swamp and she is financially straitened. How Bill Henry accepts the call of the maiden in distress, and how he battles a gang of thieving land sharks is aptly told in this amusing story, which will prove a winner with his host of admirers in Phoenix.

The added attractions include the Chester Outing, a selected comedy—and the Pathe News.

Sunday starts the engagement of Fatty Arbuckle, appearing in "Back Stage."

Jack Pickford at Lamara
Jack Pickford is the Lamara's offering for two days beginning today, presenting "A Burglar by Proxy." A delightful comedy drama is this offering, finding the versatile Jack cast for the role of a young clubman, whose romance starts when he is slowly riding along in his roadster and hears a girl singing. So struck is he with the voice, that he determines to gain admission to the household. He does this, though it cost him a perfectly good auto tire, and how he accomplishes it, starts the fun of the story. But how was he to know that the girl's father possessed a valuable mechanical secret much desired by an unscrupulous villain, who also had his eyes on Jack's charmer for a wife. And how was he to know that the villain was to steal the secret, and blame Jack for it. But what was he to do—the only city is misgoverned, he runs for mayor and is elected. A nation-wide strike threatens to have its inception in his city. Not only does he quell the unrest, but he abolishes the cause of all strikes for all time, by adopting the system of profit-sharing in his own plant and inducing all other extensive employers of labor to do the same thing. Meantime, his secretary and chief aide in the dark times of menacing revolution, his former valet, who earned promotion because he was such "a good servant," had fallen in love with the mayor's attractive young daughter. The love story of this wooing and winning in itself is an entertaining play.

A Gaumont Graphic, most timely of all news reels, and a Strand comedy that makes real laughter, are the supplementing program numbers for today.

MORLEY'S COUNTRY CLUB
By special request of a large number of patrons of Morley's popular resort, the management has promised to reopen the clubhouse Saturday nights as well as Sunday nights during the winter. The reopening next Saturday night promises to be a big gala night. The management will give away as a door prize a $25 woman's gold wrist watch. Every person purchasing an admission ticket will receive a prize coupon. There will be lucky spot dancing for raffle time, chocolates, vamps and carnival dolls. Morley's with its big fireplaces is a wonderfully comfortable and cozy place on these cold winter nights.

Lawrence Co. Goes To Mesa
The Del S. Lawrence company will leave Phoenix today to be gone over the week end. They will appear both tonight and tomorrow night at Mesa. Upon their return here Sunday night, the popular company will open with "Lena Rivers," a dramatization of Mary J. Holmes' popular novel. It is a play with which all the company is thoroughly acquainted and one which has pleased houses in all parts of the country. Both Miss Steck and Mr. Lawrence have strong parts in the coming bill.

"Are You Fit to Marry?"
"Are You Fit to Marry?" which is coming to the Columbia theater, has created a division of opinion in homes unequalled by any other film drama ever shown.

The play, which centers around the refusal of Dr. Harry J. Haiselden, Chicago physician, to allow the deformed Bollinger baby to live, several years ago, brings up a question requiring Solomon-like wisdom to answer.

In several instances, it is reported, mothers have upheld the physician's decision and fathers condemned it (but in the majority, the fathers have been the supporters of the radical action) while the mothers condemned it.

"Are You Fit to Marry?" is a gripping drama which should be seen by every woman, for it portrays a problem with which every one nowadays is vitally concerned.

IN REAL LIFE

Not one of our best selling fiction writers could have woven such a love plot as the one we're going to tell you about. If anyone of them had done it, you and the rest of the reading world would have agreed that it was "too imaginary." However, it did happen. Mrs. Florence A. Robinson was loved by two men. One was her husband. The other, Grover Gordon, appears to have won the husband's place in the wife's affections. The husband went away. The other man, however, was not entirely satisfied that he was secure in the woman's love. In a jealous rage he shot her. A moment later he regretted the deed. At the hospital he twice gave of his life blood for transfusion into the woman's veins. Physicians believe his blood saved her life.

"I love her," Gordon said. "I will give all of the blood in my body—my life, to save her life."

That sounds as romantic as anything the fiction writers put down.

But let us continue—

"I am through with Gordon," the woman said. "My love for him has turned to hatred."
